Do You Know How Your Employees Really Feel?

Have you ever hired someone who did not meet your expectations?

Have you ever hired someone who exceeded your expectations?

The challenge is hiring more of the good ones than the bad ones.

- Recent research indicates that 80% of today's workforce is less motivated than they used to be.
- The Gallup organization indicates that 77% of employees don't like their jobs and therefore perform below their capabilities.
- Harvard Business indicates that the traditional hiring process results in less than a 15% chance of making the right decision, but assessing and using behavioural interviews will increase the odds of a good hire by up to 60%!

The ProScreen Survey is a pre-hire assessment designed to give employers the critical information they need to make the most informed decision in hiring new employees. With fully automated transitions in questions for candidates that are just entering the full-time workforce versus candidates with more experience, the ProScreen offers tremendous insight into who a person is beneath the surface. Employers will discover who a candidate is in the following five areas:

- General Work Experience
- Work Ethic
- Reliability
- Integrity
- Team Skills

It's not what you see that gets you in the interview. It is what you don't see. MuRF can help!
